I detected increased concentration of acetaldehyde in the blood of 8-10-week-old rats receiving alcohol ad libitum for 22 weeks (45 g/kg body wt/day) by using pyruvate as a substrate and measuring the NADH formed by alcohol dehydrogenase activity. This finding was suggestive of the occurrence of a chronic increase in the hepatic concentration of acetaldehyde. To test this possibility, I studied the time and acetaldehyde concentration dependence of the relative rates of synthesis of all the major proteins in the liver, using young rats fed alcohol for up to 20 weeks. As expected, the rate of protein synthesis decreased significantly during this period, but there was no evidence of an increase in acetaldehyde concentration or of a prooxidant state. I conclude that alcohol metabolism by itself is not likely to contribute to the cellular damage caused in the liver by chronic alcohol ingestion./* This file is part of Mitsuba, a physically based rendering system. Fetal heart rate evaluation with the Bispectral Index in twin pregnancies: a preliminary report. To assess the fetal heart rate (FHR) value of the Bispectral Index (BIS) in twins. This study included 10 patients with twin pregnancies. The mean maternal age was 30.3±5.8 years. The mean gestational age at the time of delivery was 33.9±1.3 weeks. The gestational age at the application of BIS was 11.7±4.1 weeks. The BIS was applied during the spontaneous FHR pattern, as well as after one dose of 2 microg of oxytocin in all patients. All measurements were recorded by the same technician. Thirty-minute recordings were made and processed offline. The mean baseline FHR was 111.5±11.8 bpm (range 93-130), and the BIS was 70.8±3.4 (range 64-72). The maximum baseline FHR was 124.9±19.2 bpm (range 108-140) and BIS was 89.1±5.3 (range 85-95). In terms of change in FHR with oxytocin, the baseline FHR decreased, reaching a maximum of 87.6±11.8 bpm (range 79-96) and the BIS decreased to 54.1±7.0 (range 47-56). The linear regression analysis showed a moderate correlation between BIS and baseline FHR (R=0.51, P=0.01). The correlation between the BIS and the maximum FHR achieved with oxytocin was weak (R=0.22, P=0.54). The BIS allows a quick and continuous estimation of a change in FHR in twin pregnancies.#== === ============
